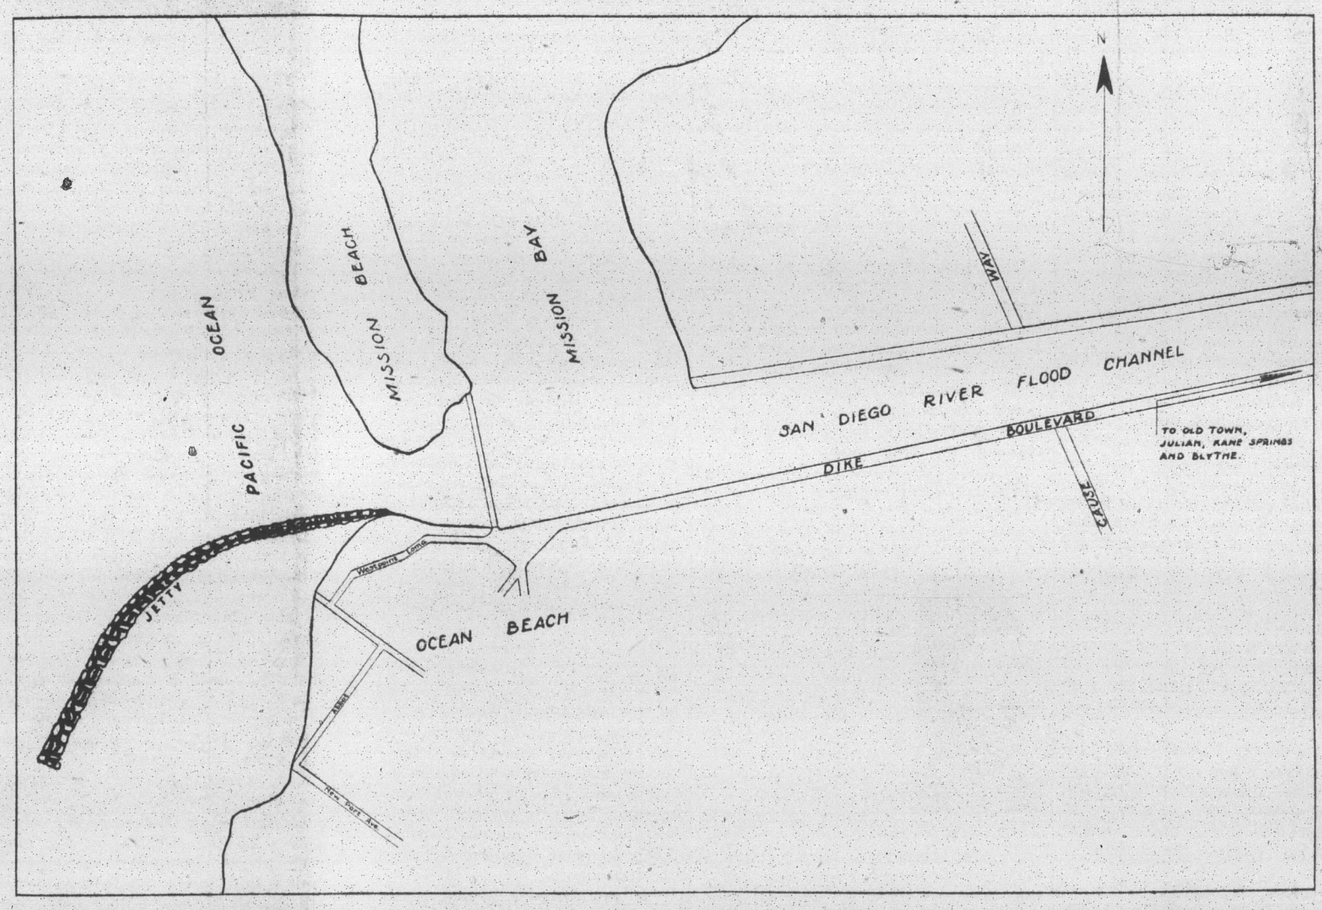
PROPOSED JETTY FOR MISSION BAY CHANNEL



With the assurance given this week that construction will soon start on six mole piers on the bay side at Mission Beach the channel entrance is the next project which needs the earnest attention of people of the beach area. These moles will be a great improvement for the bay and with dredged and protected channel entrance many yachts and small boats will harbor here.

Sponsored by the local chamber of commerce some time ago this jetty now assumes possible construction in the near future as outlined in the following letter to the News by Supervisor Ed Hastings.

May 13, 1936.

Editor,
Ocean Beach News,
Ocean Beach, California.
Dear Sir:

Pursuant to the discussion recently at the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce with reference to a breakwater from the mouth of Mission Bay extending into the Ocean to protect Ocean Beach and the new proposed flood control channel of the San Diego river, I have made a tentative study of the situation and am submitting this proposed map for consideration of a federal project to be submitted.

We are assuming that the relief allotment now in progress of going through Congress will be allowed and money available for this work very shortly.

As you know, the Congress recently passed a bill for a Government survey of the San Diego river and channel for flood control purposes, sponsored by Congressman Burnham, and the President has signed the same so the money should be available for this survey and we presume it will be started within the very near future.

I believe that it is time some definite effort be made to submit this project to the Government for immediate development.

E. E. Wallace, State Highway District Engineer, resident of San Diego, has made a study of widening the dike on the south bank of the San Diego river to a width suitable for a highway leading up Mission Valley. Plans are almost complete for the improvement of Mission Valley road to the gorge.

The County is now, through the WPA, improving the Mission gorge road to Santee, and the City and County are also improving the road on up to El Capitan dam. The City is now constructing a road along the south shore of El Capitan dam and the County is contemplating putting in a prison camp above the dam to finish a first-class highway to Julian.

Last Sunday I was over the Julian-Kane Springs road with Engineer Wallace, studying the possibilities of realigning the road to the most suitable grade.

The San Diego County Planning commission and the County Highway committee have been working diligently on a short-cut from Niland to Blythe, and I ultimately hope to see a main highway extending from Ocean Beach to Blythe, intersecting Highway No. 60 running to Los Angeles, thus providing a short-cut to the coast, fifty miles shorter than the road to San Pedro. This new road will give access to the large new development that is expected in Palo Verde Valley, and also a short-cut from the hot belt to the coast.

This road is more than a probability as we have been working on it for several years, and it now looks as though we are going to have success in the near future.

Regarding the jetty: There is a tremendous amount of stone and granite available in the Mission gorge, approximately only a ten mile haul to Ocean Beach. I would propose to haul this material by truck on a tonnage basis, giving anyone owning a truck the privilege of hauling this rock thereby making a living.

This rock transportation would create a tremendous amount of employment of loading the rock, hauling the rock, and putting it into place.

As you will note on the map, this jetty would be a much needed protection for Ocean Beach; would eliminate entirely the riptides; would form a yacht harbor for small boats, and also could be used to some extent for ocean fishing.

This is a very desirable and much needed and worth while project, and if we will all get our shoulders to the wheel, now that the Government is taking an interest in the survey of the San Diego river and the State is making a survey of Mission bay, and will all work together, I firmly believe we can accomplish our purpose.

Very truly yours,
EDGAR F. HASTINGS.

HISTORY AND USE OF ANESTHETICS GIVEN KIWANIS

Starting the Kiwanis program Wednesday noon, young Joe Mock and James Masters of Point Loma High school, told of the forthcoming play "The Poor Little Rich Girl" to be given at the high school, and that the student body was making a strenuous drive to secure enough funds to buy a modern projecting machine for their auditorium. A sound equipment machine is desired and will cost from $850 to $1500, according to size and quality.

Dr. I. W. Parks was chairman of the day's program and had for speaker, Dr. James Milton of San Diego, who demonstrated and told the discovery of many of our more common anesthetics as well as giving a very instructive impromptu talk on anesthesia. Dr. Milton told of "Evipal" a new agent of this nature which is becoming especially useful for dentists and surgeons.

Vocal selections by Myron Green and James Hughes were enjoyed.

Dr. Eastman and Lawrence Smith of the La Jolla club were welcome visitors.

Valuable Awards Offered for Essay

A very worthwhile essay contest sponsored by the V.F.W. auxiliary is getting under way with highly attractive prizes for the contestants.

The project is for high school pupils, age 14 to 18, to be 500 to 1,000 words, and the topic, "What the Statue of Liberty Means to the American People." June 30th is the closing date with the awards to be made October 28, and the winner for the U.S.A. will be presented with the award at the base of the statue of Liberty on Bedloe Island.

Each state will award first and second prizes, though the one chosen as best over all, will receive a week's stay in New York city, a trip to France, cash award of $100 for incidentals, will be entertained in different cities by units of the V.F.W. auxiliary, and receive many other features of interest in connection with the award.

The local auxiliary is anxious for the north shore and Point Loma students to participate in the contest.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. H. J. THOMAS

Mrs. Edith Legare Thomas, beloved wife of H. J. Thomas, 1582 Sunset Cliffs blvd., passed away at her home Saturday, May 9th. Funeral services were held Monday at 4 p. m. at Bonham Bros. mortuary, Rev. W. S. Dunn officiating.

Mrs. Thomas was aged 63 years, a native of Charleston, S. C., together with her husband had lived 30 years in Detroit, Mich., and came to make her home here four and one-half years ago.

Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn her passing two daughters, Mrs. Ethel Lewis of Sunset Cliffs and Mary Hartel of Long Beach, also a son, R. B. Thomas of Detroit.

Farm Market for Day At Exposition Sunday

With construction of the Farm Bureau's Market-for-Day nearing completion everything is in readiness for Farm Bureau day at the Exposition next Sunday.

That is the day when Farm Bureau scrip replaces money as the medium of exchange in the Exposition, the day when an estimated 10,000 growers and producers, agriculturalists of all lines, will trade their produce for their day at the Exposition—for entrance tickets and the bank nite drawing, for admission to all the concessions, for lunches and dinner, for popcorn and refreshments of all kinds—with no limit on the number in any one party and no bar on any kind of produce, poultry, livestock, or any of the edible and marketable products.

The market is being built on the concreted area just south of the Indian Village and a gate is being cut in the fence to the Indian Village ot permit the cars and trucks bearing produce and stock to drive into the area. The contents of the car or truck will be given the customary market inspection. If it passes—and it must—its value will be appraised and the owner given that amount in scrip.

The driver then will be directed to one of the parking lots being reserved for agriculturalists that day. They are all on the Park blvd. side of the grounds and at the north end.

One of the long tables in the "Market" will be reserved for pedestrians who bring their day's fun in baskets, bags or cages.

The appraisers have been appointed by the Farm Bureau Day committee—Ralph Cook, executive secretary of the Bureau; Eric E. Eastman, county farm advisor; Robert R. McLean, county agricultural commissioner; Elwood T. Bailey of the Exposition, and Milton Heller of Safe-MacMarr stores who is to market the entire "take" of the day—and approved by the Farm Bureau. The chief appraisers, each of whom has appointed his own staff, are Robert Ellis, for fruits and vegetables; E. A. Johnson, poultry and products and rabbits, and Charles Jacobsen for the larger stock.

The value of each commodity will be based upon the market quotation for that commodity of Saturday.

While there is no limit on the amount that will be brought, the scrip will be accepted at the Exposition Sunday only. It has been issued in 5-cent, 10-cent, 25-cent and 50-cent denominations.

WALLACE MOODY CONCERT PLANNED AS S. D. TRIBUTE

A testimonial, county-wide in its scope so that the legion of men, women and children to whom he exemplified the spirit of song may be privileged for Tuesday night, May 26, in memory of Wallace Moody.

Befitting the occasion and the man, the testimonial will take the form of a concert, at Russ auditorium, San Diego. Tickets have been placed on sale, through service clubs, and musical organizations.

Local Chamber Protests Against Beach Supervision

The Ocean Beach chamber of commerce held its semi-monthly meeting Monday evening and the first order of business was to direct the secretary to write a letter to the city council protesting against the action of play ground director Kearns, in refusing to place lights in the recreation building for the recent flower show, also to state the organization was far from satisfied in the manner of life guard supervision at the beaches.

Three youngsters, Barbara Brown, Joe Mock and John Smithers, of Point Loma high school came before the organization and asked the support of the chamber in endorsing their production of "The Poor Little Rich Girl," to be produced May 28 and 29 at the high school auditorium with the proceeds to be used in buying a movie projector. The meeting voted approval of this high school project.

Other routine business was disposed of and several communications ordered answered and filed.

Real Estate Transfers Above Average Here

The high activity that has shown in some sections for real estate transfers has been well reflected at Ocean Beach, Point Loma, Loma Portal and La Playa, being above the average here.

Transactions for April jumped 115 over March in the city, the latter being the largest previous month. The average prior to March for the particular section above named was 48 for a month, then came March with 66 transfers and April with 51.

100x140 ft., corner Santa Monica ave. and Cable st., was recently sold to C. D. Driscoll who on Monday started the construction of a $4,000 frame-stucco residence and garage on a part of the newly acquired property, it being his intention, it is said to later build on the unused portion.

Adjoining the Driscoll property on Santa Monica avenue, Ben Jackson acquired a 50-foot lot which he later traded to G. J. Kenline, for one on the opposite side of the street, which joins the Jackson court.

C. L. Downs is building a $200 addition to his property at 4883 Muir avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Warner have purchased the Wm. J. S. Jones property at 4416 Brighton avenue.

Mrs. Frances Neill, librarian at Point Loma high school, recently purchased a lot on Lotus street and is having a cottage and garage built on the same.

Mr. and Mrs. James Duvall are building a substantial addition to their present residence.

Charles Kemp, 729 Santa Barbara st., is building a frame-stucco cottage and garage to cost about $2,000

SILVER SPRAY HOTEL HAS NEW CHEF IN CHARGE

Mrs. Virginia Dorman, successful operator of cafes at Ocean Beach and Pacific Beach, Monday took charge of the dining room and kitchen at the Silver Spray apt. hotel.

Mrs. Dorman's last venture the "Virginia D" at Pacific Beach enjoyed a splendid patronage and a paying business was built up there by the Dormans who sold out in the summer of 1935.

State Files Suit For Bay Tidelands

The State of California has started a suit, finally, to quiet title to numerous parcels of tide lands surrounding Mission Bay. The suit, No. 84864, names a number of Ocean Beach people who still have some title to partially submerged tidelands. No map is filed with the suit, but metes and bounds are well described.

These tide land suits must be settled definitely before improvement is made by the Mission Bay State Park Commission or the city of San Diego in its plan to build a splendid recreation center here.

Veterans To Hold Grand Victory Ball

The greatest gathering of veterans ever to be assembled in Southern California is anticipated at Mission Beach ball room, on June 20, 1936, when the combined veteran organizations of San Diego County, Calif., will present the "All Veterans Victory Ball." Started by post No. 2415, V.F.W., and post No. 433, American Legion, the undertaking has rapidly gained momentum and at present has as additional participants the United Spanish War Veterans and the Fleet Naval Reserve association. Within the next ten days it is expected that all other veteran organizations will have been contacted and will vote to participate.

A grand door prize of one 1936 Dodge de luxe sedan will be given away at midnight. The holder of the winning ticket need not be present in order to claim the grand prize. Numerous other door prizes will be awarded for which the holder of the winning ticket will have to be present in order to receive.

One of the best orchestras in Southern California will furnish the dance music and many notable entertainers will beguile the guests during intermissions. An original and novel bathing beauty contest is now being planned which will once again place Southern California on the map as the spot where good things originate. A popular girl contest is also under consideration. Entries for both affairs maybe made at room 247, U. S. Grant hotel, where headquarters have been established, and where the committee, Harry P. Aubrey, chairman; Fred H. Norris, business manager; Logan D. Ruggles, publicity and Ed V. Izac, veterans coordination, are to be found on duty from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily.

House Hurriedly Passes New Revenue Bill—Roper Stirs Business Men to Sharp Retort—Young Farouk Becomes King of Egypt.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

WITH extraordinary speed which the opposition considered indecent, the administration's new $803,000,000 revenue bill was pushed through the house. The vote, 267 to 93, was almost strictly along party lines. The roll call showed 82 Republicans and only 11 Democrats voted against the measure, while four Republicans deserted the minority to cast their lot with the administration.

Sen. Harrison

The bill was handed to the senate whose finance committee, headed by Pat Harrison, had been studying it in secret sessions in order to be prepared for the public hearings that opened two days after the house had acted. There had been predictions that this committee would modify the measure radically, but the opposition to it in Democratic ranks seemed to have faded away and its passage by the senate without material change was deemed probable.

As passed by the house the bill provides:

1. A graduated tax on corporation income which, it is estimated, will force distribution of $3,360,000,000 more in dividends and yield the government an additional $620,000,000 annually.

2. A "windfall" tax on unpaid or refunded processing taxes imposed under the invalidated AAA, which is expected to yield $100,000,000.

3. Continuation of the capital stocks and excess profits taxes for six months to yield $35,000,000.

4. A refund of $35,000,000 to processors who suffered financial losses under the old AAA.

THE $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, with its threat of currency inflation, was blasted out of its pigeonhole Friday and assured of a vote in the house during the present session.

Five representatives signed the petition to remove the bill from the house rules committee, completing the 218 signatures necessary to bring up the bill.

Speaker Byrns, Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee, and the other Democratic chieftains, by sheer political power, are said to have held the farm-mortgage, currency-expansion measure in the committee for more than a year under express orders of President Roosevelt.

The Frazier-Lemke bill proposes to amortize farm mortgages by the issuance of $3,000,000,000 in new currency. It provides for a sharp downward revision of interest rates on mortgages.

DANIEL C. ROPER, secretary of commerce, appeared before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its annual meeting in Washington and warned its members, most of whom are persistent critics of New Deal policies, that unless private enterprise takes up the slack in employment, business must pay the relief bill out of earnings.

Sec. Roper

"It is the responsibility of all business and industrial enterprises," said Roper, "and not of one particular segment of the government to increase its efforts for greater employment. If a substantial measure of increased re-employment does not take place the taxation for relief purposes will come largely from business earnings. There must be re-employment or a longer period of increased taxation."

Roper admitted that the administration had fostered bureaucracy, but insisted that it was occasioned by an emergency, and responsibility for its increase again lay at the door of private business.

Various members of the chamber replied spiritedly. Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National bank of Chicago, predicted that if the administration embarked on a sound fiscal program that would inspire confidence, business would make rapid strides toward recovery. He criticized the pending tax on corporate earnings as impracticable and a brake on business expansion and stability.

Fred H. Clausen, president of the Van Brunt Manufacturing company of Horicon, Wis., told the chamber that the rising tide of public spending had been "rolling onto our people for five years," and there was no end in sight. He declared that the re-employment mandates laid down by President Roosevelt, Secretary Roper and others were practically impossible in the light of the increased burdens heaped on industry.

The American Federation of Labor reported that "little or no progress" had been made in re-employment during the first quarter of this year.

The federation estimated 12,184,000 persons were unemployed in March. Seasonal gains in business and agriculture, returning 559,000 persons to work, were "about normal," the report said.

CONTINUING the policy of centralizing control over the activities of American citizens, the senate passed a new vocational education bill introduced by Senator Walter F. George of Georgia and supported by Majority Leader Robinson of Arkansas. It was strongly opposed by Senator King of Utah, Democrat, who insisted education was r responsibility of the states, not of the federal government.

The measure authorizes an annual appropriation of $12,000,000 to be distributed among the states on a matching basis, in proportion to population. In addition it authorizes $1,200,000 a year to be allotted for the payment of salaries and travel expenses of vocational teachers, and $1,000,000 a year to be allotted for the preparation of teachers and supervisors.

FUAD I, king of Egypt, died of a gangrenous throat infection at his country place near Cairo at the age of sixty-eight. The crown prince, Farouk, a sixteen-year-old pupil in the royal military academy at Woolwich, England, was immediately proclaimed king and started for Egypt, sailing from Marseilles on a British liner escorted by a British warship in order to avoid going by way of Italy.

King Farouk.

Before his death Fuad named a regency council of three to govern the country until Farouk comes of age. The young king, who is six feet tall and well educated, hopes to return to England to complete his studies at Woolwich. It was feared in Cairo that Fuad's death would have an adverse effect on the negotiations for a new Anglo-Egyptian treaty which will give Egypt a greater measure of freedom from British control.

Fuad, a descendant of Mohammed Ali, founder of the Egyptian royal house, was the youngest son of Khedive Ismail Pasha "the magnificent" Egyptian sovereign from 1863 to 1879.

NO OTHER member of congress has been having so lively a time as has Marion A. Zioncheck of Washington state, the Playboy of the Western World. He has been arrested, jailed and fined, and has fought with the police; and the other day he suddenly decided to marry Miss. Rubye Louise Nix, a stenographer in the accounting division of the PWA at Annapolis. With a Washington license he dashed around looking for a minister who had left the city several years ago. Then he rushed to Maryland, obtained another license, woke up a domine and he and Rubye were made man and wife. Next day Marion led Mrs. Zioncheck into the gallery of the house, and the members all arose and cheered them. Perhaps his actions will be a trifle more conventional hereafter.

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER has made Hermann Wilhelm Goering controller of national economics, and he has decreed an era of Spartan simplicity for the German people. Goering summoned the commissars for raw materials to a conference and warned them they must further restrict imports and help draft measures to increase exports. Only goods vitally necessary to the army and materials needed to produce goods for foreign export must be allowed to enter Germany, Goering decreed.

Officials of the propaganda ministry further darkened the picture of the near future by telling the press it must prepare the public for a "stiffening of relations between France and Germany as soon as the French elections are finished." They also deplored the fact that relations with England have suffered.

ITALY'S victorious troops in northern Ethiopia continued their advance on Addis Ababa, though it was somewhat retarded by the efforts of the natives to blow up the roadways and otherwise harass the invaders. The Italian motorized column in this movement is the most formidable yet formed in this war and is notable for the large number of white troops included.

General Graziana's southern army, meanwhile, was driving toward Harar, second city of the empire, in three columns. The Ethiopians were putting up stiff resistance at various points but everywhere were driven back, according to Italian dispatches.

When the Italian forces reached Debra Birhan, only 75 miles from Addis Ababa, Emperor Haile Selassie ordered the capital city left undefended, hoping the invaders would occupy it without bloodshed. The government prepared to move out, and the native inhabitants all scuttled for the hills. Foreigners took refuge in the legations, the Americans going to the British compound where there was a bomb-proof shelter.

SENATOR ALBEN W. BARKLEY of Kentucky, who was temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention in 1932 and as such delivered the keynote speech, will serve in the same capacity at the Philadelphia convention in June, outlining the issues of this year's campaign as his party views them. Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas will be the permanent chairman again. Yet another repeater will be Former Judge John E. Mack of New York. Four years ago he placed Franklin D. Roosevelt in nomination, and he will do it again in June.

Sen. Barkley

These selections were made by the committee on arrangements. Other officers of the convention chosen, are: Lee Barnes of Alabama, chief doorkeeper; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, national committeewoman of the District of Columbia, hostess of the convention, with Mrs. Agnes Collins Dunn of New Hampshire as assistant; Col. Edward C. Halsey, secretary of the senate, sergeant at arms; Representative Clarence Cannon of Missouri, parliamentarian, assisted by Representative John J. O'Connor of New York; W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the convention.

National Chairman Farley said that the two-thirds rule, which has prevailed in Democratic conventions for a century, will not be abolished. The rules committee will be headed by Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri and it will report for abrogation of the two-thirds rule as well as elimination of the unit rule. The latter binds the state delegations to abide by the decision of a majority of the delegation. According to Mr. Farley, these changes will not prevent the practically unanimous nomination of President Roosevelt.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT made what might be considered the first of his campaign speeches before the National Democratic club in New York city. Tammany was there in full force, but such disgruntled Democrats as Al Smith and John J. Raskob were conspicuous by their absence. Mr. Roosevelt declared his purpose to bring more food, higher prices and better homes for the people.

"If you increase buying power," he said, "prices will go up; more goods will be sold. Wages ought to and must go up with prices. This does not mean unsound inflation or skyrocketing prices; this should be avoided just as we seek to avoid bankruptcy sale values."

Turning to his critics with sarcasm, the President said "some individuals are never satisfied." Referring to charges of extravagance and mounting deficits, he said people complain to him about "the current costs of rebuilding America, about the burden on future America." He insisted that the measure should not be the three-billion-dollar deficit of this year but the assertion that the national income has risen thirty-five billions in 1932 to sixty-five billions in 1936.

CIVIL war in Austria became a possibility as the quarrel between the Fascists led by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg and the clerical and monarchist elements became acute. Government officials, however, were trying desperately to patch up the trouble.

Prince Von Starhemberg

Prince Von Starhemberg, who is vice chancellor, in a defiant speech at Horn warned his political opponents that his heimwehr, or home guard, would be dissolved "only over my dead body."

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, speaking at Baden, retorted that "Austria is not Italy and Austrians are not Fascists."

Von Starhemberg asserted that if internal foes press too hard there will be a "repetition of 1934"—when the heimwehr triumphed in a short but bloody civil war against Socialists. False friends surround Schuschnigg, von Starhemberg said, and the heimwehr plans to protect him from them.

For Austria, said Starhemberg, there are three possibilities—a continuation of the authority of the state, Nazism, or communism. He asserted the heimwehr is determined to preserve the Fascist system and would continue as a separate organization.

CONTESTS aided by Mrs. Oliver Harriman, New York society leader, and Alfred E. Smith, Jr., were barred from the mails as "lotteries" in orders signed by Postmaster General Farley. The orders were directed against the National Conference for Legalizing Lotteries, Inc., of which Mrs. Harriman is president, and the Golden Stakes Advertising company, of which young Smith is vice president and counsel.

In the latter case a temporary injunction restraining the New York postmaster from enforcing the order was obtained from Federal Judge Knox in New York.

ARMY and navy officials were reported to be concerned over a new treaty with Panama which is being secretly considered by the government. It was said an uncorrected text of the pact showed it provides for "joint conversations" rather than for defense of the Canal Zone in event of aggression. The grant by Panama for the "use, occupation, and control of lands and waters outside the jurisdiction of the United States," if necessary, is renounced by this country in the treaty.

Sao Miguel

Wine Barrels Are Carried Under the Carts.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SAO MIGUEL of the Azores islands is turning from oranges to pineapples as its chief source of wealth. Excellent oranges are still grown, but since the island lost the British market a few years ago, pineapple culture has occupied agriculturists.

Natives of Sao Miguel hope to develop their island into an "Isle of Pines" which will provide a good part of Europe with practically all its fresh supply of pineapples.

An Englishman, a skilled horticulturist, arrived at Sao Miguel more than eighty years ago to lay out the famous Jose do Canto gardens. It was he who brought the first pineapples to his employer's hothouse. Twenty years later the fruit was shipped to England, each pine in its pot selling for two guineas. England and Germany are now the chief consumers of Azorian pines, France and continental Portugal following.

The plant, which is here of the smooth-leaved Cayenne variety, is grown under glass, special beds of fermenting heath or some other mountain shrub being provided. All the plants are brought to blossom at the same time by a process of smoking, the value of which was accidentally discovered many years ago when a carpenter, working in one of the pineapple houses, chanced to set fire to a pile of shavings. To the surprise of the grower, the plants, instead of being spoiled, burst into flower. By this method practically all the plants in a hothouse can be marketed at the same time, many months earlier than formerly.

Little glass houses shimmer on emerald slopes in various sections of Sao Miguel, the exclusive producer of pineapples in this archipelago. Wrapped in cellophane or packed in excelsior and crated, the fruit is shipped to the European market by a fleet of three vessels owned by the growers. In 1934 about 2,000,000 pines, worth half a million dollars, were exported.

Tea, Too, Is Grown There.

Another exotic industry on this island is the production of black and green tea, which here retains its oriental name, "cha." Ever since they discovered the sea route to India and planted their settlements as far afield as Macao (Macau), on the coast of China, the Portuguese have been a tea-drinking nation.

There is an old belief that tea is better if it has not crossed the sea. Whether this is true or not, Azorian tea tastes to some much like the far eastern variety on its native soil. It is consumed locally and shipped to other parts of Portugal.

A number of Chinese were originally imported as instructors in the tea culture, but now only native labor, chiefly female, is employed. The plantations dot the hillsides on the northern side of the island, which has greater moisture than the south coast. The stiff little evergreen shrubs stand in precise rows, very foreign in appearance, contrasting strangely with the familiar European flora about them.

A motor road parallels the coast of Sao Miguel, with connecting crossroads, enabling the traveler to see much of beauty and interest, even in one day ashore, including trips to the two largest volcano craters.

On the country roads are slow-swaying bullock carts, with woven-willow bodies filled with heath for the pineapple houses. Some are of archaic pattern, with solid wheels of the Roman type, their approach heralded by a complaining, creaking "song."

Sao Miguel has a deliciously green and restful countryside. Checkerboard fields, brown and green, alternate with woods filled with songbirds. These islands, like those of the Madeira and Canary groups, are the habitat of the wild canary of greenish-gray hue. Its glad note is one of the pleasantest features of the Azores, where it seems to be more generous and more vocal than on the islands farther south.

Near every stone cottage stands a corn rick where brownish maize in the husk is hung to dry. It forms the staple cereal crop of the islands. Fava beans (broad beans) and yams are grown and are leading articles of export.

In the Crater of a Volcano.

Skirting pine-clad cliffs, a road climbs to a misty, heather-clad tableland; then descends into Furnas valley, shut in by towering green walls. Were it not for the puffs of steam ascending from its many boiling sulphur springs, it would be difficult to believe that this peaceful vale is the crater of a mighty volcano which more than once poured out its molten lava and which still speaks through vents in the hot sulphur-stained crust around the springs.

It is a beautiful picture from the heights, this quiet, sheltered valley with its long, narrow village meandering like a stream through woods and meadows. The lake, on a raised platform of the crater, lies some distance from the settlement, which is a favorite summer resort.

Prescott, the famed historian, came to Furnas as a young man to visit at the summer home of his grandfather, first American consular officer in Sao Miguel, who was appointed in 1795 by President Washington.

Furnas has a thermal establishment, where sulphur and iron baths are available. Near-by fountains supply various kinds of mineral water, the place being noted for the diversity of its waters and the proximity of hot and cold springs.

One deep, cavelike caldron, belching forth boiling mud and steam, is called "The Mouth of Hell." Its evil appearance and the strong smell of sulphur give the impression that this is really an entrance to the abode of His Satanic Majesty.

Stately manorial houses, erected centuries ago, are to be seen throughout Sao Miguel, usually set on the heights. One such house, built in 1724, is a delightfully romantic old place. The big stone-paved kitchen has a chimney-place which is a room in itself. Standing in it, beside the huge brick hearth, one can look up the wide chimney, which towers above the house, to a patch of blue sky. Such chimneys are a distinctive feature of Azorian houses.

Life of the Inhabitants.

The upper class of Ponta Delgada leads a pleasant life, quiet as compared with the stress of American cities. There is a social club where dancing is a favorite pastime; a coliseum seating 2,600; a sports field for football, tennis, croquet, and handball; a baseball park; and an open-air sea pool built in the rocks by the shore.

There are motion pictures twice a week, chiefly from Hollywood. American influence is apparent in the English spoken throughout the Azores. There seems to be a genuine liking for the United States. The Stars and Stripes are in evidence at every festival. During the World war, Ponta Delgada was an American naval base.

Economically self-contained, the Micaelenses are no less independent when it comes to their social pleasures. In their amateur shows the scenery is apt to be painted locally, the costumes made in the homes of the young men and women who participate. In their singing, dancing, and acting these young people exhibit amazing talent and poise.

The young folks mingle in crowds, but there is here no such free and easy companionship among them as exists in the United States. The chaperon is still in vogue and "balcony courtship" is carried on with its own prescribed etiquette, the girl leaning over the second-story balcony to talk with her admirer on the street below.

The finest sight on the island is the crater of Sete Cidades (Seven Cities). The view from the rim is magnificent. The cup-shaped crater is nearly ten miles in circumference and holds, besides a lake with a hamlet on its shore, pastures and cultivated fields and three volcanic cones due to subsequent eruptions.

Owing to varying depths and deposits, the lake, shaped like the figure 8, and sometimes spoken of as two lakes, is vividly green at one end, brilliantly blue at the other.

The Lindberghs, on their aerial odyssey from Greenland's icy mountains to the steaming jungles of the Amazon, swooped down over this secluded lake.

There are many among the poor of the Azores who have suffered since money orders have ceased to arrive from Manoel or Antonio, who formerly prospered in Providence or New Bedford. The Azorian assets are a stout heart, a willing hand, a productive soil, and a climate which, though damp and rainy six months of the year, is without extremes of temperature.

Wages are low, but food is cheap. The main diet of the peasant consists of soup of cabbages, beans and potatoes, white cornbread, and fish. Pork and beef are only for special occasions, such as religious holidays. In the Ponta Delgada market 60 small fish sell for two and a half cents; a pound of green peas for less than two cents. A fresh live lobster, which is only for the well-to-do, costs 25 cents.

Find Roman Ruins in Bavaria

A Roman temple, the third of its type, has been unearthed near Regensburg, in southern Bavaria. Coins found when a wall was excavated in an orchard at Ziegetsdorf, in this neighborhood, proved to hail from the Second and Third century after Christ, and inscriptions were discovered establishing beyond doubt that the wall had formed part of a temple dedicated to the god Mercury.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

A good many thousand people have lately returned from European lands.

Travel

Some of them know what they wanted to see when they got there and saw it.

They got something useful and unforgettable out of their trips.

The majority of them went there chiefly for the purpose of showing their neighbors that they could afford it.

They would have learned a great deal more if they had stayed at home and looked at the local scenery.

Darwin's idea of a place worth seeing was the extreme or almost the extreme tip of the South American continent.

He wrote a book about his travels which you will do well to read if you haven't read it already.

Marco Polo, perhaps the first explorer, learned more in a few years about the fun and interest to be got out of traveling than his fellows had got in all their life-times.

* * *

A thirst for travel springs from a thirst for knowledge, and that is a thirst for education and enlightenment.

Fabre, observing the actions and habits of spiders in his little back yard, and Maeterlinck, making similar studies of bees, gave the world something to think about and ponder on for the rest of its life. Yet neither of them in gaining their special knowledge needed to move from their homes.

I think that in some future time, which may not be far off, college professors will take the young men and women under their charge to distant lands and distant places, or even to spots close to home and deliver lectures on the way.

* * *

A very great writer said that "Home-keeping youths have ever homely wits."

By home-keeping he meant remaining "local boys" who only see the interesting manifestations of life and Nature, and learn nothing about them.

If you cannot travel in person, travel by means of books, or by listening to those who have seen the world with the definite purpose of learning all that one can learn about it.

Interest and excitement help to mold life for the better.

Get all you can of both. Never let your wonder lag.

We are just beginning to learn what we ought to know about this planet of ours.

Instruction is now definite and systematized.

Make the most of it, and you will be making the most of life.

* * *

You can, of course, learn from your own mistakes.

Mistakes

But to do that you must admit to yourself that they are mistakes.

For the average man that is difficult.

Nobody wants to admit that he is in the wrong—even to himself.

The best way to make progress is to learn from the mistakes of other people.

That will open to you a wide and fertile field.

In the old days of rough and ready doctoring, it was said that many physicians buried their mistakes, and therefore never got any blame for them.

But that was in another time, when even the practice of medicine was on the cut and try system.

Today most doctors know their business. They must or they rapidly cease to have any practice.

* * *

As soon as a doctor finds it possible to leave his practice for a short time, he heads straight for one of the great medical colleges or medical centers, and brushes up on his business.

The result is that many more sick people are brought back to health, and many more well people continue well, because their doctors tell them how to take care of themselves.

Naturally the practice of medicine has gone ahead of most other professions.

The most important thing to every man or woman is life. And if their lives are endangered or made a burden to them by illness they at once turn for help to the men whose trade it is to keep people well.

But let me get back to my topic.

* * *

When somebody you know—somebody who ought to have succeeded—has failed in his business or his profession, try to find out why.

If he is fairly intelligent, as I take it that your friends are, there must be some reason for his failure.

Dig that reason out, if you can.

Learn where and why he committed mistakes.

Then overhaul your own mental machinery, and see whether or not you are taking the same road.

That will involve a little thinking, but thinking, as far as I know, has never injured anybody.

Life with all its activities is constantly going on around you.

Make careful use of it, note the rise or fall of men around you.

Then when you are put to some crucial test, you will know how to take the right course.

TALL TALES

As Told to:

Blondy by a Tongue!

'WAY back in 1892—said the Old turfman—I owned as beautiful a racing mare as ever was foaled. Her name was Blondy because of her color.

My other possession was a farm in the Blue Grass country on which was hung a "plaster" of $15,000.

Bad luck cut between me and the purses although Nigger Jim, my trainer, would get her cream-colored body in the pink before every race.

We taught Blondy a lot of tricks, between losing races. One was to make a face. Nigger Jim or I would hold an apple or carrot so she had to stretch her neck and put out her tongue for it. And she got so she would do this whenever we told her "make a face."

We entered the mare in a claiming race at Churchill Downs the spring of '92. It was May 15, to be exact. The mortgage on the farm was due May 16. Nigger Jim had Blondy in great form for the 1⅛ mile race. But the bookies were laying 20 to 1 against our nag. I managed to scare up exactly one thousand berries and placed the whole roll at 20 to 1. It was win the race or lose the farm.

The horses were away evenly but 100 yards from the start Blondy stumbled and lost stride. We groaned but heartened as she winged away, regaining lost ground at every jump. Then a horse cut in front of her. It was Dixie Dude, and she had to be pulled.

Down the back stretch and around the turn they came. Blondy was moving up on the outside. When they hit the stretch she and Dixie Dude were running head and head.

It looked like a certain dead heat but at the last jump or two Nigger Jim, hanging on the rail, yelled "Make a face, Yo' Blondy! Make a face!" Thank God! Blondy heard, straightened her neck, shot out her tongue across the finish line and won the race."

Man-Made Mesas

AFTER Paul Bunyan finished his work logging off the Pacific Northwest he decided he'd become an oil-driller. First thing he did was to go down into New Mexico and begin drilling a well on top of a mountain.

Paul's well was sunk to a depth of 14,006 feet without a sign of oil. Funny thing about that mountain—it was made up of alternate layers of thin rock and dry sand.

One night a windstorm came up. And how she did blow! The next morning when Paul woke up he looked out of the window of his shack and such a sight as met his eyes! There was his hole, standing straight up in the air as high as he could see. The wind had blown all the sandy layers away from it but the layers of rock were hanging around it like washers pushed around a drill stem.

Paul was pretty mad about it but he didn't waste any time standing around cussing. He just took a sledge and climbed up to the top of the hole. When he got there, he began pounding the hole down into the ground again. As he did so the layers of rock began to come together and in less than no time they made a mesa.

That sort of thing happened time after time and that's why New Mexico is so full of mesas. They're perpetual monuments to Paul Bunyan's unsuccessful oil-drilling operations there.

The Squalling Squonk

SOME cold, winter night, as you sit before a roaring fire in a hunting lodge or in the bunkhouse of a lumber camp in the North Woods, you're certain to hear outside a long-drawn-out moaning. But if you think it's the wind in the bare branches of the trees, you're mistaken! Your lumberjack friend will tell you it's a squonk, mourning because it has a warty, ill-fitting skin.

That's all a squonk ever does—just goes wandering among the hemlock trees, weeping and sobbing bitterly because its skin doesn't fit. When the thermometer is down to nine degrees above zero, you can follow it by the little globules of ice it leaves behind—the squonk's trail of frozen tears.

Because it is such a shy, nocturnal animal few men have ever seen a squonk. But once a lumberjack, by imitating its cries, lured one into his cabin. The little beast seemed perfectly satisfied until he shut it up in a wicker basket. Then it began to sob and moan.

This went on for hours, then died down. The lumberjack peeked into the basket to see if the squonk had cried itself to sleep. But all he found was salt water and a few bubbles. The squonk had dissolved itself in its own tears. "I mighta known better," said the lumberjack, as he added one of his own tears to the collection, "than to have shut up a squonk in a basket made from branches of the weeping willow tree."

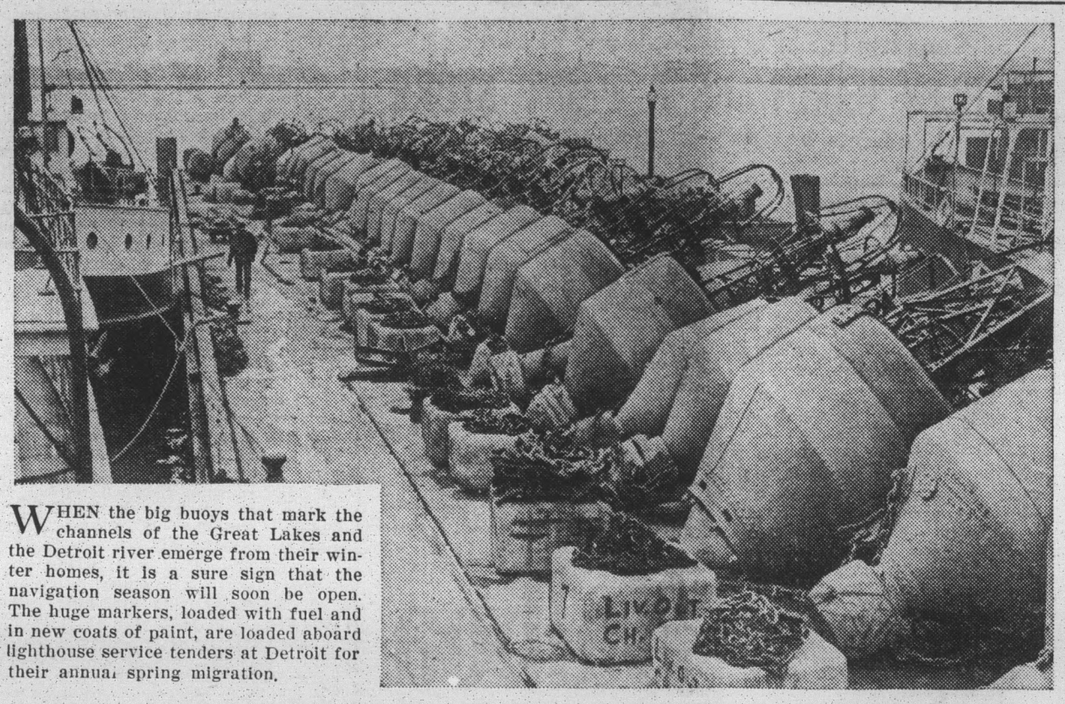
Strange Burial Custom

The Toradjas, a primitive race of Celebes, have strange burial customs. The body remains in the house for two years, until the death rites have been completed, and then it is placed in a tomb, cut in the side of a mountain, the entrance of which is forever guarded by a lifelike effigy. Incidentally, the Toradjas are the only people whose holy men are known to dress in women's clothes.—Collier's Weekly.

This Means Lake Navigation Season Is Open



WHEN the big buoys that mark the channels of the Great Lakes and the Detroit river emerge from their winter homes, it is a sure sign that the navigation season will soon be open. The huge markers, loaded with fuel and in new coats of paint, are loaded aboard lighthouse service tenders at Detroit for their annual spring migration.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK BECOMES SUSPICIOUS

OF ALL the little people in the Green Forest there is none with sharper eyes, and keener wits than Billy Mink. Nothing goes on along the Laughing Brook, from its start in the Green Forest to where it joins the Big River, that Billy Mink doesn't know about. Billy is a great traveler. He is so full of life and energy that he cannot keep still very long at a time. Moreover, Billy is one of those little people to whom it makes no difference whether jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun is shining or gentle Mistress

Billy Mink Followed the Man Down the Laughing Brook.

Moon has taken his place up in the sky, or the Black Shadows have wrapped everything in darkness. He takes a nap whenever he feels sleepy, and whenever he doesn't feel sleepy he travels up and down the Laughing Brook.

In these little journeys back and forth nothing escapes Billy's bright eyes and sharp ears and keen nose. Being such a slim fellow he slips in and out of holes and hiding places which no one save his cousin, Shadow the Weasel, could get into.

Now it happened that one day Billy curled up in a hollow log under a pile of brush close to the Laughing Brook. In a jiffy he was asleep. Right in the middle of the pleasantest of pleasant dreams he was awakened. Instantly he was wide awake. He was just as wide awake as if he hadn't been asleep at all. Without stopping to think anything about it, he knew what had awakened him. Some one had just passed his hiding place.

Noiselessly Billy crept out of the hollow log and peeped from under the pile of brush. Walking down the bank of the Laughing Brook was a man. "I've never seen that fellow before," muttered Billy to himself. "It isn't Farmer Brown's Boy, and it isn't Farmer Brown. He seems to be looking for something. I wonder what he is about. I think I'll watch him."

So, as silently as a shadow, Billy Mink followed the man down the Laughing Brook, and the man didn't once suspect it. You see, Billy can always find a hiding place if it be no more than a heap of brown leaves. He just slipped from one hiding place to another, always keeping the man in sight.

Billy became more and more interested and inquisitive as he watched that man. The man certainly did seem to be looking for something. He would examine every half sunken log in the Laughing Brook. He searched carefully every little hole. It didn't take Billy long to discover that this man seemed to be especially interested in those places where Billy almost always went when traveling up and down the Laughing Brook.

Billy stopped and rubbed his nose thoughtfully. He was growing suspicious. "I wonder," thought Billy, "if he is looking for me."

MAGICAL CORKS

THE magician displays a small cardboard box. He opens it and reveals two small corks inside. He closes the box, shakes it and reopens it. The corks have multiplied. There are four instead of two.

The box is prepared beforehand. Boxes of this type, obtainable at any drug store, actually consist of two lids, with a ring or collar between.

In the upper lid the magician glues two corks. He drops two loose corks in the lower portion. Thus, in performing the trick, he begins by showing only two corks, not revealing those that are attached to the lid which he removes.

Closing the box, the magician shakes it. In so doing he turns over the box. The lid which he lifts is the original bottom of the box. Thus the box contains four corks.

ORDINARY DISHES

THE cook who can present an ordinary dish in an extraordinary way is a genius. Many of our homely dishes with a bit of pep in the form of different flavors for seasoning, will become quite unusual dishes.

Beef Stew.

Take two and one-half pounds of chuck steak, wipe it with a damp cloth and cut into one and one-half inch squares. Heat four tablespoonfuls of suet in a Scotch kettle, add the meat and brown well. Season with salt, paprika, a few dashes of cayenne, one-half cupful of diced celery and three tablespoonfuls of chopped onions. Cover with eight cupfuls of cold water, cover tightly and cook two and one-half hours. During the last 45 minutes add the following vegetables sprinkled with salt to season: Six medium-sized potatoes, six each of carrots and parsnips, scraped. When ready to serve thicken the stew with melted butter, adding flour and the stock from the stew. Cook well and pour over the meat and vegetables. Serve all together on a hot platter.

Here is something new, if you like apples, and who does not?

Apple Jam.

Take four pounds of apples, peel and cut into slices. Place in a kettle with a two-pound can of corn sirup and two pounds of sugar, the juice and rind of two lemons, three ounces of ground ginger and six cloves. Cook slowly two hours. Put into a marmalade jar and cover tightly.

Chocolate Mousse.

Melt three squares of chocolate, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of thin cream; boil one minute. Cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla, a pinch of salt and the whip from three cupfuls of heavy cream. Add a tablespoonful of gelatin mixed with one-fourth of a cupful of cold water to the hot chocolate and mix all together after the gelatin is well dissolved. Pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

AT DAWN SOME DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

LET us arise at dawn some day,
Not even wash and put away
The breakfast things, but leave a few
Behind for lazy folks to do,
Let us arise and see this earth
The moment of its daily birth,
Up yonder hilltop let us hike,
See what a rising sun is like.

The woodlands will be dewy wet,
But every flower diamond-set,
The morning breeze a little chill,
But we won't mind who climb a hill,
The waking thrushes caroling,
But you have never heard one sing
Until you hear one sing to greet
Another morning cool and sweet.

The bluest blue the distant scene,
The woods around the greenest green,
The whitest white the sandy beach,
And heaven near enough to reach,
For thus are waters, woods and skies
When morning calls and earth replies,
When first the shadows slip away—
Let us arise at dawn some day.

REMEMBER THE CRISIS ?

How easily men forget.

It was spring in 1933, and near panic gripped California taxpayers. Heavy property and land taxes were simply too much. Delinquencies mounted. Many were losing their homes and farms. A tax strike threatend.

What to do? The Board of Equalization had an answer. It was their Riley-Stewart tax relief plan. Quickly a special election was called for June. People jammed the polls to put through the measure by an overwhelming majority of 300,000. How this saved the day is an old story—how it lightened unbearable taxes on land and provided permanent blocks in the constitution against the recurrence of the nearly disastrous situation.

But there is reason today to remember this old story, now that the oft-rejected Single Tax (land tax) proposal has popped up again thinly disguised as sales tax repeal. It would knock out constitutional limits to land taxes, ultimately putting the entire state load on land; it would open the way for a crisis to make the one of 1933 seem merely a picnic.

The Board of Equalization has an answer here, too, which is "no" to the Single Tax. It is just another worry for this overworked body which, besides all its tax duties, is still saddled with the thankless task of liquor control and will be until a constitutional amendment in November removes the job to a new commission. But the Board wants no more taxation messes such as the one they straightened out three years ago, and such as the Single Tax would make possible again. Nor do any of us.

Let's remember the crisis of '33!

The National Presidential Conventions are always looked forward to with much political interest, hope and anticipation. That time is now scarcely a month away when the two major parties will assemble. The two events will take place in June, the Republicans at Cleveland, Ohio, June 9th, and the Democrats at Philadelphia, June 23rd. Hon. Bertrand Snell is to be permanent chairman of the Republican convention. He is Congressman from New York, and by the way, was chairman of the 1932 convention. His reappointment by the convention committee was considered tantamount to the high position because of his excellent qualification in the previous convention four years ago. The city dads of the Quaker City are putting up $200,000 in cold cash to entertain delegates to the Democratic convention, and the party has already adopted the Liberty Bell as the symbol of the convention. Philadelphia is a Republican center, but the Democrats have confidence in the generous favors from both parties. The mayor, a Republican, has even promised to lend unqualified support to the visitors. The auditorium, built at a cost of 5,350,000, will seat over 15,000 people.

It is widely known history by now that California moved into 1936 leading all states in recovery. But the Commerce department came through the other day with its explanation for this fact. California leads, they said, because we don't put all our eggs in one, two, or even three baskets. It's the diversification of agricultural and industrial activity out here. And this does sound pretty logical. Take a look at some of our "diversification" as it's reflected in the sources of our basic income. We raise beans, wheat, cotton, potatoes, rice, sugar beets, citrus fruits, prunes, grapes, walnuts, peaches, apricots, apples, almonds, all vegetables cattle, sheep, hogs. We have fisheries and lumber camps. And we manufacture everything from motion pictures to butter and cheese.

The most noteworthy advance being made in mechanical science, is the individual airplane. It is called "a plane for the average man," and it sounds very utilitarian. This individual plane flies more than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and will be priced low—subject to mass production, if the demand warrants. It is exceptionally safe, having new "staff-proof and spin-proof" devices. It will land at 40 miles an hour, cruise at 131 miles an hour, fly 580 miles on a tank of fuel.

BOOKLET ON HOMES $1,200 TO $2,500 NOW AVAILABLE

Designed to provide practical guidance and suggestions to persons contemplating construction of homes in a $1,200 to $2,500 price range, a booklet entitled, "Principles of Planning Small Houses," has been published by the Federal Housing administration and is being given general distribution, according to F. W. Marlow, district director of Southern California office.

Copies of this booklet will be available for distribution at all field offices of the Federal Housing administration after May 15.

It is emphasized in the booklet that the Federal Housing administration will not furnish any "stock" plans for low priced houses. The booklet is merely suggestive and educational. It contains five perspective drawings and floor plans of homes that may be constructed for between $1,200 and $2,500. The examples shown are illustrative and suggestive only. They represent a starting point from which amplification and improvements can be made as circumstances permit or as local conditions demand.

Don't Smash California

THE most vicious tax measure ever submitted to the citizens of California comes before the voters on November 3rd, threatening major disaster throughout the State that will leave ruin and bankruptcy in its wake.
It is impossible for human ingenuity to contrive a scheme more certain to stop the growth and development of California. Yet few people know about or understand this proposed law.
When you get the facts and understand the meaning of this proposal, you will understand why the cooperation and support of every thinking citizen in California is needed to prevent the passage of this tricky constitutional amendment.
Placed on the ballot under the guise of "Sales Tax Repeal," it will actually mean imposition of a Single Tax on land, resulting in confiscation of property by insupportable taxes.
Join and help organize your local committee to fight against the ruin of California. Do it now. Do not delay.

Bob Decker's boys team won the boys sportsmanship pennant; and Jane Richley's girls team captured the girl sportsmanship banner.

"OCEAN FRONT NEWS"

"Ocean Front News" published by the L6, H6 class in Miss Figgins' room made its first appearance last Thursday. Great interest in the first issue was shown by the young journalists who evidenced the true artistic spirit by refusing to be altogether satisfied with first results and are planning to produce a greatly improved second issue.

"SAFETY FAMILY"

Safeties who have just ended their term of office gave a play Monday morning to students of the school called the "Safety Family" which stressed safety rules for the home bringing out the fact that as many people are injured in homes as are injured by automobiles. The leading parts were as follows: mother, Barbara Norris; Betty, Kathleen Norris; Bobby, Frank McElwee; Jimmie, Jack Blackwell; Sam John Sherwood; father, Robert Litten; Alice, Beth Knight; Mary, Betty Lou Jones. When the family decided to practice safety they illustrated safety rules by giving a grab-bag play. Eddie Thomas was the clown and Robert Roche, the barker, advertising taking chances in the grab-bag. The play ended up with the motto "SAFETY is our motto. SAFETY is our rule; SAFETY is our by-word, at the Ocean Beach School."

At the organization meeting of the new safeties, Glen Billups was elected captain and duties were assigned. A moving picture, "Why Be a Goose" was shown. J. Bilk, one of the parents who happened to be visiting gave a safety talk which the children thoroughly enjoyed.

Family Relations Conference

Attention of parents is called to the conference on family relations to be held Saturday May 16 in the morning, afternoon and evening at Roosevelt Jr. high school, Park Blvd. and Upas street.

The entire conference will challenge the thinking of all parents. The Young Peoples' forum give youth a chance to discuss their problems. To encourage freedom of discussion adults are requested not to attend the Young Peoples' forum.

WHAT SAN DIEGAN SAW OCEAN BEACH FLOWER SHOW

"Ocean Beach Gardens in May," the Ocean Beach Garden club's third annual flower show, which opened Saturday noon in Ocean Beach recreation center on Abbott street, near Newport avenue, is a glorious symphony of radiant bloom in amazing variety of form and color.

The long table of single bud roses is especially excellent with its fine single specimens of beautiful Talisman, rich Hadley, clear yellow Claudius Pernet and softer toned Angel Pernet, dainty Yellow Bruner and many other varieties of this queen of flowers. On the other table of roses, vases filled with roses, a white rose almost six inches in diameter is especially outstanding.

Sweetpeas, shading from rich mahogany to dainty pastels; gorgeous gladiolas, including a fascinating violet specimen; a beautiful display of fuchsias, snapdragons, amaryllis, double ruffled petunias, big fluffy Oriental poppies and a colorful table of geraniums as gay as in their more easterly homes where they are tenderly nursed in pots through the winter season, are among the most interesting exhibits.

Probably the most fascinating exhibit of all is the long table of blooms from one beach back yard, including a huge basket of tall gladioli, two big baskets of snapdragons, and bouquets of larkspur, roses, violas, salpiglosas, carnations, geraniums, pots of maidenhair fern, an odd potted Hemonithus, and a goodly number of other varieties.

There is a table of cacti and succulents—always holding their own perculiar thrill — bright blooming cacti and the little green fellows like prickly fat pickles; also a miniature cacti garden carefully laid out with tiny potted plants and a tall tree-like cactus in the center. Nature's own blossoms are well represented in the wild flower table.

A delectable looking table of fruit includes sapote from Honduras, tangelos (cross between grapefruit and tangerine), fine avocados in several varieties, lemons, grapefruit, papayas and one huge onion.

A table of flowering shrubs among many others the coral tree with its tropical flame colored bloom, odd Japanese hop, purple lilac, white bignonia, orange sheptosolen and dainty blue hardenbergia.— J. T. M. in S. D. Union.

BUILD NOW

NOW IS THE TIME . . .

To let a firm that has a long established record of service aid you in your building problems. When you build you do not wish to have doubts as to the permanency of your structure because of inferior lumber. The surest way to avoid this is to depend upon a firm that has an enviable record for the quality of its products and the integrity of its policies.

THE PROBLEM OF FINANCING . . .

Is one easily worked out with us and if you are contemplating building it would pay you to drop in and let us talk over your problems. This is a service we gladly render without obligation and you need not hesitate to consult us even if you are not sure of completing a purchase at this time.

The fact that we have five branch yards in addition to our local yard will indicate the strength of this organization.

Warren-Walker School

Friday, May 8th, the children of the Warren-Walker school gave a party honoring their mothers. Each child presented his mother with a corsage which was made up of flowers grown on the school grounds.

The program was as follows:

A group of songs sung by the intermediate and senior groups.

"A Bird Song" by the primary children. "Mother" by the primary trio, Joanne Dechmann, Maurice Read, and Robin Haskin. "Who Loves Best" read by Lloyd Lauson. A skit about Mother's day by the intermediate group. Lincoln's Mother by Eugene Walter. Whistler's Mother by Howard Harvey.

After the program refreshments were served.

The intermediate group was very much interested in a collection of water animals that was brought to school. These included May fly larvae, fish, pollywogs and a water beetle.

The swimming class is happy to welcome two new members, Lloyd Lauson and Peter Pinney.

PRIZE WINNERS NAMED AT ARTS LUNCHEON

Arts and crafts section, San Diego Women's club, closed a happy and profitable year at its May final business session and luncheon last week.

The day particularly honored the fine arts department which has a display of its year's work done under Mrs. Isobel Schneider, on the clubhouse walls.

Prizes for these, offered by Mrs. Paul Reiss, club president and others for the best still life, landscape, figure and portrait paintings, were awarded, judges being prominent artists, Maurice Braun, Charles Reiffel and Alfred Mitchell.

Winners from Ocean Beach were: For still life, Mrs. Alberta Hayward, honorable mention. Figure painting, Alberta Hayward, second.

TAX FOR GASOLINE ON THE INCREASE

Sacramento,—Gasoline tax assessments for March totalled $4,404,051, a figure surpassed only once in the history of the gasoline tax in this state, Ray Edgar, member of the state Board of Equalization, announced.

The assessment for March, 1935, was $3,243,021, showing an increase for the current gasoline tax report of 36 per cent, Edgar said.

METHODIST CHURCH

"Why Christianity Lives" will be the subject of a sermon by Rev. J. H. Hughes at the Methodist church next Sunday morning. The sermon will deal with the original teachings of Jesus which are elemental truth and necessary to its continuity.

Lynn Winans will direct the choir, and Aaron Cole of San Diego will sing a tenor solo. The service begins at 11 o'clock.

Classes for boys and girls and adults in religious education at the regular church school hour 9:45. Young people's meeting in the evening at 7 o'clock.

Ocean Beach P-T.A.

Ocean Beach elementary met at 2 p. m. in the school auditorium, Wednesday, and heard Mrs. Margaret McCloud, guest speaker, outline the meaning of music in child training. A social hour followed.

Mrs. Esther Wisdom reports an enthusiastic response by the citizenry of San Jose to the PTA convention held there last week. The convention theme resounded:

"Of all the educational opportunities, the social sciences stand first, that we may learn to live together well, then the arts and recreations that we may learn to live together happily, next the skills and vocations that we may learn to live together prosperously, last the academic subjects that we may learn to live together traditionally."

Mrs. J. W. McCausland, representing Point Loma, accompanied Mrs. Wisdom. Mrs. Merle Byrne has been elected to the presidency of 9th district PTA while Mrs. Nell Horner won the place of 2nd vice president. Mrs. Byrne, Horner and McCausland are past presidents of Ocean Beach PTA.

The forum on family relationships, open to all parents, in the Roosevelt Jr. high school, Saturday, May 16, is claiming honors before the post convention dinner to be held May 19. All parents urged to come and listen in.

LOMANS PRESENT BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

With two casts in rehearsal and the stage crew making and arranging sets, the drama department's production of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" will be ready for presentation on Thursday and Friday, May 28, 29, in the Point Loma High school auditorium.

Playing in the exaggerated pantomime manner, which director W. E. Shepherd styled for the fantasy, two casts will act out the story of Gwendolyn, the young daughter of wealthy parents. Neglected by her father and mother and mistreated by her servants and teachers, Gwendolyn, under the influence of an overdose of sleeping potion, conceives friend and enemy in a fanciful dream. She recovers from the her imaginative flight and there is a happy ending

The casts have been divided into two groups; one to play the realities, "awful" and "dearest", and one to play the dream.

In "reality" Gwendolyn will be portrayed by Jane Clark. Other members of the cast are Betty Ballinger as mother, Keith Vensel as father, Barbara Healy as Jane the nurse, Faye Pielop as Miss Royle the governess, Bob Rockwell as Thomas the footman, Harry Le Barron as the organ-grinder, John Smither as the doctor, Dave Robinson as the plumber, Steve Porter as Potter the butler, and Marion Stone, Betty Barksdale, Margaret Cooper, Helen Smith, Joan Wilson, Jeannette Moellering, Edgar Gill and Kathleen Schrack in other roles.

In the dream, the Poor Little Rich Girl is enacted by Barbara Brown. Other cast members include Isabelle Miller as mother, Clay Williams as father, Ralph Kinnings and John Wansley as the man who makes faces, Helen Walbridge as the two-faced thing, Faye Peilop as the snake in the grass, James Lynch as the man who rides hobbies, John Wansley and Ralph Kinnings as the big-eared footman, Dorian Paskowitz as Puffy the bear, Jack Schaeffer as the policeman, Lawrence Casselman as the piper, Seymorir Golden as the Kings English and the little bird and Betty Hurley, Joyce Purdum, Billie Ann Tanner, Frances McConnell, Mary Karl, Barbara Richards, Eileen Finley in other parts.

Boy in the fourth period gym class are performing as the "Horses on the Merry-Go-Round".

Tickets are on sale now at fifty cents each in the financial office and from student body members.

GIRLS BUSY ON SPORTS

If you wander to the gym these days you will find girls taking their turns at hitting the little white pill back and forth across the new ping-pong set.

Wandering out to the field, you might wonder if your eyes are deceiving you; or if those modern girls were really Robin Hoods. Point Loma girls have taken up archery. The new bows are stiff, but they will soon hit the bull's eye—it is hoped.

Out on the tennis court you wonder if you have encountered the tennis champ. On second thought, no. They are only practicing for their tennis tournament.

Ever play tether ball? The gym girls find it great fun! Other girls during gym periods are jumping rope or pitching horse shoes, or playing deck tennis, and showing their ability at tumbling.

In fact, they are having their tryouts at all minor sports as planned each spring by Mrs. E. Dixon in charge of Girls' Athletic activities at Point Loma.

The annual Honor Society banquet was held Thursday evening, May 14, at the Golden Lion tavern. Schools partcipating were La Jolla, Point Loma, Hoover and San Diego Highs.

Point Loma acted as hosts; Mistress of ceremonies Lily Bell Couts is also president of the Point Loma chapter of the California scholarship Federation. Decorations and place cards were handled by Marjorie Cooper, secretary. Marva Belt served as program chairman.

Entertainment was furnished by the different schools.

A spring motif was carried out in the decoration scheme for this dinner attended by about 200 Honor Society members of the city high schools.

Miss Irma Gibson is faculty sponsor of the Point Loma group.

—PLHS—

Finishing touches on the master program for next semester are being added by the Principal, vice-principal, dean and counsellors. As soon as the program is complete, which will be in the next few day, students will be permitted to make out the school program for the fall. Time for planning and adjusting is thus given to school and home.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The ROTC is to assemble at the municipal swimming pool May 15 for the over-night hike to Camp Kearney. There is to be a meeting engagement or two-sided maneuver between the Army & Navy Academy, which will be the 'Red' force and ROTC units from Point Loma, San Diego, and Hoover High schools will be the 'Blue' force. The winning side will be judged by the side that knows the most and how the maneuver is conducted.

After the engagement, the ROTC is to have an entertainment at Chesterton.

Camp Commander for the hike will be Major Edgar B. Coleman, Field Artillery Reserve and the mess officer will be Major Morton P. L. Buck, Q. M. Reserve.

Major Van Fleet complimented very highly the Point Loma ROTC after the federal inspection on May 5 and Mr. Swenson gave a talk.

Captain Spellmeyer is trying to get a rifle range for Point Loma. He says, "I feel sure the Point Loma ROTC will be the honor school with a range."

Private Amos Feete is afraid the wind will blow his blankets off him while he is in the grip of Morpheus on the overnight hike

"Ditch Day", significant of the last lap of the trail to graduation, is planned by the seniors for Wednesday, May 20. Envious underclassmen will wish they were eligible to play all day at Del Mar.

Chairman Frank Riehle says that many forms of entertainment have been planned.

Faculty sponsor, Kenneth Christianson, chosen by the eighty-five graduates as mentor, will accompany the seniors on their "Ditch Day".

Point Loma is planning a special day at the Exposition. On Thursday, May 21, students from the High school will be admitted for five cents. Assemblies and conducted tours will be provided for the students. Perhaps a minimum day will be the order of events.

—PLHS—

Alcohol as a problem is to be discussed by C. H. Fowler at a special assembly at Point Loma High school Tuesday, May 19, at the regular time. This talk is in line with the State program for the teaching of temperance.

The lecture is being sponsored by the PTA.

—PLHS—

First prize for ensemble playing was won by the Point Loma Trio Saturday at the Southern California Festival of Allied Arts.

This honor was claimed by Elinor Rohde, pianist; Bob Davis, violinist; and David Bryant, flutist, a trio which has enjoyed unusual success together for a long time.

In the fall it probably will break up, due to Davis' and Bryant's plans of attending Pomona. Miss Rohde will attend State College.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Rev. W. S. Dunn will occupy the pulpit in the morning hour of worship at 11 o'clock. His sermon theme will be "Finding Faith."

The young people society meet in the school room at 6:30 p. m. The young people of the community are invited to meet with these two groups for a discussion of personal problems. At 7:30 p. m. there will be a service of song, at which time the pastor will speak on "The New Ambition." You are cordially invited to the services of this church.

ANNA M. SPEER GIVEN BON VOYAGE PARTY

A bon voyage party and shower was held Monday at the home of Mrs. Eva Hayes in honor of Mrs. Anna M. Speer who departs May 19th for the east. Participating in this pleasant surprise were Mrs. Adelle Perry, Mrs. Dora Bingham, Mrs. Jeanette Russell, Mrs. Willema E. Padgett, Mrs. Esther Wisdom and Mrs. Chas. Stoddard.

Mrs. Speer was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents all of which will add enchantment and happiness on her journey.

Tuesday Mrs. Speer was entertained by the members of the Tuesday club of San Diego at the home of Mrs. Emma Whitney, This being in addition to a farewell to Mrs. Speer the tenth anniversary of the founding of this club. All of the charter members were present.

Only That and Nothing More

The fat man was trying to find some tropical clothes in the Far South resort. He tried most every store in town, and patient clerks had politely made a pretense of looking over their stocks and advising him they were just out of his size. Finally he ran across a clerk more truthful than diplomatic who—after looking him over—said:

"Frankly, mister, we carry nothing in stock that would fit you, except collar buttons and handkerchiefs."—American Legion Monthly.

In a Nutshell

The theater was in an uproar.

"They're calling for the author," said the manager.

"But I can't make a speech!" replied the man responsible for the play.

The manager grabbed the playwright and impelled him along the passage. As he shoved him toward the curtain he said curtly: "Well, just go in front and tell them you're sorry."—Hudson (N. Y.) Star.

Romance in Nature

If one can find romance in nature, life need never be dull—unless one's work separates him from nature.

"She was lying down on her bed when a gag was clapped over her mouth. Pharaoh, of course: but alone. She put up a fight, but he very soon had his way. He bound her wrists and ankles and took her master key. Then he carried her down her private staircase and into a secret room—the antechamber, in fact, to the cellar where lies the gold.

"I'm afraid there's no doubt that she suffered: but, except that Pharaoh put it across her, she simply leaves that bit out. But he must have been pretty ruthless, for in the end she opened the secret panel concealing the cellar steps.

"Well, Pharaoh and Dewdrop went down, to view the gold: but Rush and Bugle remained in the chamber on guard. I ought to have said that her hands and her feet had been freed. Still, she hadn't much chance, for they kept a torch on her face.

"I shall never understand why Pharaoh employed two such wash-outs as Bugle and Rush. The first thing those two bright lads did was, between them, to drop the torch. By the time they'd found it again their prisoner was gone. The door to the secret room is a secret door. It cannot be opened from within. It was, therefore, standing open. In a flash my lady was out and had shut the door.

"Well, though she was safe, she wasn't clear of the wood. She was locked in a staircase-turret, and Rush had her master key. She called from the embrasures, but, as the castle was empty, there weren't any ears to hear. Then, after a while she found Sabre standing beside her, licking her hand."

I felt that such a statement demanded some sort of expression of disbelief.

"But you said—"

"You shut your face," said Geoffrey. "Truth is stranger than fiction—every time. The door to the turret was open and so were the doors to her room. But her room had been used. The thieves had escaped by the chimney, entered her room by the fireplace, cleaned themselves up in her bathroom and disappeared."

"The obvious thing to do was to search the castle forthwith. I ought to have said that long before I got back, the switchboard had been repaired and the lights had come on, and while my lady was talking, the staff which had been scattered was trickling back. Florin and I induced some sort of order before beginning the search.

"We began with my lady's bedroom. One look at the hearth was enough. There was soot all over the place. But nothing and nobody else. We left the watchmen there and my lady and Florin and I went down to the secret room. It was empty now, we knew, for Pharaoh and company were gone: but the door to the cellar was open and my lady wanted it shut."

He took a deep breath.

"I'll tell you what we found. We found Pharaoh, Dewdrop and Rush—all three of them dead."

"Go on," said I, incredulously.

"Fact," said my cousin, shortly. "I'm glad you weren't there to see it. It was a dreadful sight. Bugle had done the three in and then cleared out. I fancy there'd been some scrap. Pharaoh's back was broken: he had no wound.

"And here's my interpretation of this astounding find.

"In Pharaoh's absence Bugle and Rush between them let Lady Helena go. Warrantably fearful of the consequences of what they had done, Rush and Bugle quarrelled, and Bugle killed Rush. Afraid to face Pharaoh—such a dereliction of duty meant almost certain death—Bugle decided to kill him and Dewdrop, too. And so he did. Then he escaped by the chimney, with Lady Helena's master key. This let him out of the castle by the way by which he came in. Why he waited to let her out, I cannot conceive. Possibly some twinge of conscience—you never know. That's one of the points which we shall never clear up."

"Then everything's over," said I. "The terror is laid."

"The terror is laid," said Geoffrey. "Bugle remains, of course. But I very much doubt if we shall see Bugle again."

Thoughtfully I regarded my napkin. Was it five or six days before a corpse rose to the surface of the water in which it lay?

"Then everything's over," I repeated.

"Except the interment," said Geoffrey: "which is fixed for tomorrow evening, as soon as it's decently dark. As you seem to have had a night off, I think you might help with that."

* * * * * * * * *

Six days had gone by, and my precious secret was safe.

This was hardly surprising. Only two beings knew that I had approached the castle that terrible night: and of these the one was a dog and the other was dead. I had not used Barley's pistol: I had cleaned my cousin's knife: my filthy garments lay hid in the Plumage woods. Nobody knew that in my notecase was Helena's master key.

But another secret was safe.

On the Sunday night Pharaoh, Dewdrop and Rush had been laid in a common grave, not far from the mouth of the tunnel that ran from the moat.

Though nobody knew it but I, Bugle had yet to appear. For some unaccountable reason the moat still withheld its dead.

My cousin was painting Plumage. Twice a day he visited Yorick: but I was not invited and would not go up unasked. Neither would I go to Plumage—although I longed to see her—because I was sure that Helena sat with my cousin and watched him at work.

I had made up my mind to leave Annabel and to go and stay at Innsbruck which was a city I knew. My cousin was to follow with Barley in four days' time.

And so I was sitting at Annabel, cursing life and regarding my half-packed trunks with at listless stare, when the host of the inn came bustling with a note in his hand.

Dear John.

"Your cousin tells me that you are leaving tonight. Before you go, will you be so good as to show me where young Florin lies? I would not ask you this favour, but I was fond of young Florin, and you are the only being who knows the site of his grave. I cannot believe you will refuse me, and so, if it will suit you, I will call for you today at a quarter to three. Please will you tell the bearer 'yes' or 'no.'

HELENA.

I went down to the door of The Reaping Hook, to speak to the groom.

"Tell her ladyship 'yes,'" I said.

* * * * * * * *

As the coupe stole into the forecourt, I descended the steps of the inn.

Helena smiled and nodded and I took off my hat.

"Will you drive, please?"

With a pounding heart, I took my seat by her side, perceived the glow of her presence, discovered her faint perfume. . . .

The spot to which we were going lay 12 miles off, and, after leaving the car, we must walk half a mile through the forest to come to the dell. Be sure,

A Gag Was Clapped Over Her Mouth.

I drove slowly enough. . . . But though half an hour went by before we left the coupe, in all that time we never exchanged one word.

Again and again I sought to make some remark, but I feared that my voice would tremble and so betray an emotion I did not wish her to see. To sit thus by her side, as I had sat so often, was stirring the depths of my being, as though with a sword. Though I kept my gaze fast on the road, with the tail of my eye I could see her peerless features and the gentle, steadfast look on her lovely face. She was neither grave nor smiling, but something betwixt the two: her air was the air of one whose day is over, who has of choice withdrawn from the lists of life and is now content to sit and watch the tourney in which she will ride no more. I had never seen her like this and at first I could not discover what it was that I found unfamiliar in the beauty I knew so well: and then I saw: the eagerness was out of her face.

When I brought the car to rest, Helena was out in the road before I could open the door. Then we entered the forest together, as we seemed to have done so often in other days.

In silence we came to the glade where Geoffrey had been painting when I first set eyes on the thieves, and in silence we passed to the coverts which might have been planted on purpose to keep the dell. And then at last we came out—not quite as I had intended, above the bluff, but lower down, between the bluff and the water, at the edge of a sloping lawn.

Helena caught her breath.

"Oh, John, how lovely," she said.

Though I knew the spot was handsome, when I had seen it before I had been too much distracted to consider the features that went to make it so rare.

"It's finer than I thought," I said quietly. "I never saw it from here."

For a moment we stood together, looking down on young Florin's grave.

"I must bring old Florin," said Helena. "I think it would help him a little."

Helena sat herself down with her back to the rippling brook.

"I'd like to stay friends," she said. "I know you're going away, and I think you're right. But I'd like to think that though our—our moments are over, we still were friends."

"If you please," said I, dully, and sat down a little apart. "I've so much to thank you for."

"I don't know that you have. But that's neither here nor there. We've peered at big things together—you and I. We've eaten of strange, sweet fruits—like two children, hand in hand. And now we're back where we were—where we were when you came to Plumage and I told you about the gold. We can go farther back: perhaps we have. But I'd like to stop there, if you can. I mean, one can always be friends."

"I can stop there," I said thickly.

"That's right," said Helena gently. "I thought you could."

For a moment she looked at the palms of her little hands, as though to consult those pretty pages before proceeding with a discourse that was making my heart feel cold.

Then—

"When I say friends, I mean it. I'll always have a feeling that I can depend upon you. I shan't attempt to, you know. But I shall be glad of the feeling. You know. When things go wrong, it makes a world of difference if you can say to yourself 'If So-and-so were here, they would understand.'"

"You can count on me," I said. "You let me come to know you as—as I'll never know anyone else."

"Will it help you, John?"

"I don't know. I'll write and tell you."

"That's right. And I'll always answer. You see, my dear, we must never meet again. We've looked at glory together—and turned away. It wasn't our fault, you know. We rather . . . rushed our fences. But down in that valley of shadow we gave each other judgment . . . and the judgments were good."

I could not speak. I sat as though turned to stone. My heart in my breast was ice. The blow which had fallen already, had fallen again. I had nothing to lose, and had lost it. "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

"I—I don't know that mine was," I said desperately.

"I'm afraid it was," said Helena. "I put my love above honor—and you mustn't do that. And in any event mine was. You took my love and you put it back in its place. I don't say you weren't right to do it, because you were. But there are some flowers, my dear, that you can't transplant. I mean—if you move them, they die."

Blow upon blow. Couldn't she see that the thing she was striking was dead? Everything and everyone was dead. Young Florin and Pharaoh and Dewdrop and Bugle and Rush, and now her love. And I had killed them—not Bugle, of course, nor young Florin. But everything else.

"That's all right," I heard myself saying. "I'm glad . . . it's dead."

There was a long, long silence. By the time it was over I had myself in hand.

At length—

"Poor Bugle," said Helena slowly. "He did me a very good turn."

"By dropping the torch?" said I.

"I suppose he dropped it," she said. "But Rush was bullying me, and sometimes I think that Bugle was going to stop him. I don't know, of course. When it fell, I just flew for the door. And in any event he waited to set me free."

"A twinge of conscience," said I.

Helena shrugged her shoulders.

"He needn't have done it," she said. And then again. "Poor Bugle. I'll always remember him kindly. I think he was the best of the lot."

"I think you're right," said I. "I had a weakness for Bugle, to tell you the truth. Of course Rush showed him off."

"I know, I know. But he had a spark of feeling. More than a spark, I think. Very few men, placed as he was, would have troubled to let me out."

"What will you do," I said, "about the loss of your master key?"

"Change the locks, I suppose. It's a hideous waste of money: but if Bugle's tempted, you know, there are plenty of crooks who'd pay a long price for that key."

I dared not pursue the matter: to do so would be to sail too close to the wind. I decided that Bugle must show another spark of feeling by returning her master key. I would post it to her.

There was another silence.

With her eyes on young Florin's grave, Helena spoke again.

"That wasn't the only reason why I wanted to see you before you went. I want your help in a matter. . . .

"Your cousin is painting my picture—he's nearly done. It is the most lovely portrait. . . . And as he won't hear of a fee, I want to make him a present.

"Well, I've got a cup at Yorick, an old, gold cup, with a curious history. Years ago, in the sixteenth century, the Yorick of that day was painted. A young painter came from Vienna, a man called Latz. Had he lived, he would have been famous, for the picture is terribly good. Your cousin picked it out in an instant as being the best of the lot. Well, when the painter had finished, the count was so pleased with his work that he called for wine and drank the young man's health, and when he had drained the cup he called for gold. I suppose his treasurer brought it. Then he filled the cup with gold pieces and gave the painter the lot. I hope it was adequate payment. In those days it probably was. The next morning the painter left Yorick to make his way home. On his lonely ride to Salzburg the poor man was robbed and murdered—his body was found by the road. Now the thieves didn't break up the cup, but six months later they tried to sell it at Innsbruck where Yorick then had a hotel. But, as it happened, they took it to the very goldsmith that Yorick himself employed. The moment he saw the arms, he knew that the cup had been stolen, and, to cut a long story short, the thieves were taken and hanged and the cup came back to the castle because the poor painter was dead.

Simple Lines in This Exclusive Model, Which Is a Perfect Utility Frock

Checks in crepe, silk, pique, linen or cotton lead the way to chic in this easy, casual, day dress. While the design emphasizes smooth slim lines, comfortable fullness for the skirt is provided by a wide inset at the front.

The model cuts quickly and easily, with only seams to join at the sides, panel and waistline. No troublesome armholes to discourage amateur dressmakers, as the sleeves and shoulder line belong to "one family," and a slim waistline is assured the minute you insert the back darts. This is a perfect utility frock for a multitude of daytime needs. You can make it as a house frock, too—it's so simple and quick to launder and, being collarless, even easier to iron.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1873-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44. Size 34 requires 4⅛ yards of 35 inch material. Send fifteen cents for the pattern.

Sympathy Has Power

Sympathy is a mighty power; even a touch of it in the dropping tear, the faltering voice, the quivering lip, will often move a soul to its center.

NAUTICAL DANCE TO BE FEATURE OF O.E.S. IN MAY

Point Loma Eastern Stars will give their annual ball in the Masonic hall here Saturday evening, May 23rd.

The popular Overlees orchestra has been obtained to furnish the music and slacks and beach togs will be thoroly in order at this nautical party.

Members of either organization, together with their trailers, are cordially invited.

Refreshments too.

SON BORN TO WALTER CLARKE'S AT VALLEJO

Oh blow your bugles inside out
And beat your biggest drums
Fire off your cannons
And spread the news around
If any one should ask you
The reason of my joy
Just tell them I'm the parent
Of a bouncing baby Boy.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Clarke of Vallejo, Cal., May 6th, a son. Mr. Clarke is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke of Niagara Ave. and lived here about 20 years.

At the last reports Walter was doing nicely. And if left alone will recover.
